

Susan Appelbe is a freelance musician and composer living in Glasgow. As a cellist Susan works alongside a variety of different musicians and artists in ever new challenging projects.

Her passion lies in music for all. Since graduating from Strathclyde university with a BA honours in Applied Music in 2005 she has worked as a creative practitioner in developing participatory and immersive workshops using music and art to do so.

Susan believes education should have an inspirational, safe and nurturing environment, encouraging participants of all ages to be curious, ask questions and feel free to be creative.
